Search finds content throughout the whols site that matches the user's query.

The navigation bar shown starting with "My Pages" is available on every page of the site. If the visitor is not logged in either My Pages is hidden or it becomes a tour landing page explaining why the person should register.

Marketing/Featured area will help to communicate to the potential member:

- + What is the community?
- + What is the main reason for joining?
- + What is the hook?

The "Latest Buzz" area lets people view new content amd members. So, for instance, when someone is looking at new member, the members are tiled across the screen and when a member is rolled over a web2.0 popout comes up with themember's name and pic and maybe a few other bits of information like "member since", and "location". The list of 25 pics ca be refreshed by clicking the refresh button

--

Footer links are ever present and available on all pages of the site.

--

If a visitor is already a member their start page would be the "Latest Buzz" section unless they have specifically designated their profile page as their start page in the preferences.

The options in the view pulldown changes depending on what tab is opened. So if the whole community tab is opened the user could just display content or profiles (shown)

--
When the view filter is initiated it dims all irrelevant content.

When the user selects votes on the face off the user sees the voting percentages and which members have voted. The member can then click on a user's profile or vote on the next face off
